Department of Health

Dear Pupils,

We are writing to you for help. We are working with some of the country's most respected scientists to find out more about the effects of television on healthy lifestyles.

We are in the process of making important decisions about the lives of British children. With rises in obesity rates and the decline in physical activity over the course of the 20th century, we are considering whether a total ban on broadcasting children's television would help to improve this health crisis, as we travel through the 21st century.

We want to know more about the television habits and behaviours of children across our country, to help us decide whether we need to create a law banning the broadcasting of children's television.

Yours faithfully,

Minister for Health

Department of Health

Dear Pupils,

We are writing to you for help. We are working with some of the country's most respected scientists to find out more about the effects of television on healthy lifestyles.

We are in the process of making important decisions about the lives of British children. With rises in obesity rates and the decline in physical activity over the course of the 20th century, we are considering whether a total ban on broadcasting children's television would help to improve this health crisis, as we travel through the 21st century.

We want to know more about the television habits and behaviours of children across our country, to help us decide whether we need to create a law banning the broadcasting of children's television.

Yours faithfully,

Minister for Health

twinkl planit
twinkl.co.uk
History | UKS2 | Leisure and Entertainment | The Gogglebox | Lesson 5